Obituary Flying Objects....

"I observed the object through binoculars," Bayne said. "It was a disc-shaped revolving object hovering above. It was noticeable at night because of the green, red, and white spinning lights."

Bayne said the lights resembled the spinning top light of a patrol car. He said at one point, the object seemed to be at a 45 degree angle.

Watching the object in a sort of circus-show with six other neighbors and some children Bayne said the object did not move at one point for about 20 minutes.

He said one of the neighbors called Stewart Air Force Base, and within a half-hour an aircraft approached and appeared to be on a collision course with the flying saucer object.

The plane, however, appeared to make a pass at the object and then flew away. When Bayne and his wife left at 11 p.m., the object was still visible.

Bayne who served in the Air Force, said he would discount the object was a star because it seemed to disappear and then reappear. He said he didn't think it was a reflection but obviously a "solid mass."

Bayne said he saw many planes in the air Sunday afternoon, of the "flying Boxcar" type, which are heavy aircraft, and wondered if they had anything to do with the nighttime activity of the flying objects — or saucers, or whatever it was.

Bayne said he had an interest in the reports about flying saucers, and was naturally curious. He said, however, he was "thankful" he was not alone when he observed the object at length. He said it was something he has never seen before.

Bayne's wife watched the object Monday night, and reported it moved positions drastically.

Bayne asked an unresolved question: "What if they are vehicles with beings? Why have they not tried to communicate?"

Dr. Walter F. Gard, a chemistry and astronomy professor, set up a telescope at Orange County Community College Monday night, and after viewing objects, announced they were stars.

Officials at Stewart Air Force Base, however did not announce they were stars. An official made no other comment except to say an investigation is being held.

Ludlum Opens Campaign

James E. Ludlum, Jr., Republican candidate for Supervisor of the Town of Monroe, formally opened his campaign at a Republican meeting, September 18. Mr. Ludlum, for his first plank, proposes that the Town of Monroe should have three assessors instead of one. "In a town which has over 6,000 parcels of land, three assessors would be much more preferable to one," he said, "for the following reasons:

1. Three opinions and judgments are better than one in order to get the best possible equitable assessment.
2. In the event that the office is vacated, when there is only one assessor havoc can ensue and it would be wiser to have experienced and qualified assessors still on the job.
3. With three assessors, the ability to assess properties by personal visit and water to industries cut side our water districts.

At that time I spent a lot of time questioning members of the Town Board on this issue. I also wrote several letters to our various newspapers in this locality. I am glad to see that some of the town board members have come around to my way of thinking. Now is the time to come out against these things, there is an election coming up.

I am running for councilman of the town of Woodbury as a Conservative Party candidate. I would like to take this opportunity to ask the people of the town of Woodbury to vote for me so I can continue to question any matter which I believe would not benefit our residents.

I would like to go on record for: 1. Zoning regulations not being applied to one and all, we need zoning and its benefits our town but it is not now being used in the interests of the av-

These people saw an object or light refraction of unknown cause. There have been no reports of any airborne sightings although Huguenot Vortac is in the location of object sighting. Huguenot Vortac is the intersection of several jet and low altitude routes. Inquiries, so far, have been negative as to air sightings. The length of time observed seems to possibly indicate an object of relatively fixed location. The sighting could be a refraction of sun's upper limb; however, if such, it should have risen on horizon instead of falling, as the shape of object would indicate reversed image.
